latest driver for your device.[Evaluation of the quality of life of patients with amyotrophic lateral sclerosis]. The objective of this study was to evaluate the quality of life (QOL) of patients with amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS) in the course of their disease, in order to identify the effects of symptoms on their QOL and to verify which of them could be improved. A cross-sectional study was carried out on 86 patients with ALS attending the Neurology Service of the Hospital de la Santa Creu i Sant Pau in Barcelona, between 1996 and 1999. Clinical state was determined, according to the ALS Functional Rating Scale (ALSFRS-R), and its subscales. The results of three SF-36 (short form 36) scales were analysed. The functional state and the time elapsed from the onset were significantly associated with the QOL. The age-of-onset, the functional state and the evolution time did not correlate significantly with any of the SF-36 scale scores. The correlations between the SF-36 scales scores and the ALSFRS-R showed that the functional state had the strongest influence on the QOL. The functional state was the more significant variable in determining the QOL of patients with ALS. The age-of-onset, the time elapsed from the onset and
