The Bucks dropped a convincing 115-103 win to the Celtics, who for the record, were playing their final game of a road trip at the State Farm Arena. But it was LeBron James who was the main star in the game, dropping a triple-double (27 points, 12 rebounds, and 11 assists) while contributing with an efficient 15-of-23 shooting. Milwaukee's starting point guard, Giannis Antetokounmpo, was a part of the star-studded Dream Team that played in the 2019 NBA All-Star Game, but he struggled to find much success against his long-time rival. It was Milwaukee's second straight loss against Boston after losing 115-105 to them back in December, but the Celtics and Bucks rivalry has been an entertaining one. The Bucks now have a chance to put a stop to Boston's NBA Finals aspirations with the remaining games of the season, including the Bucks' Wednesday night matchup at the TD Garden. ESPN's national broadcast of the game (as well as the game's pregame show) will be anchored by Rachel Nichols, with analysis from Doris Burke, Tom Tolbert, and Mike Breen. Buckets will be running the studio during the nationally-televised games.
