I have worked in education for most of my life. I think my ultimate passion has been the opportunity to allow students to succeed in an authentic pursuit. I have focused on teaching and learning science, calculus, trigonometry, reading, and writing skills to a diverse group of students. I have a Masters in Management Information Systems and I am currently pursuing my Doctorate of Philosophy. As a leader, I have always taken advantage of my leadership and communication skills. My goal in life is to help all people become their best. I think it is important that people be aware of how they can be actively involved in their own health, fitness, and/or nutrition. I have participated in physical fitness competitions, run for fun, raced for charity, and really enjoy running marathons. My moor mission has always been to help others live their best life. I am open to taking on more opportunities in the future such as teaching, mentoring, speaking, and organizing events. My Philosophy I like to think that I am a hard worker and always willing to learn new things. My philosophy includes working hard to reach my goals and always being aware of what is going on around me. I want to be involved in my church, community, and local government. I care about the environment and human rights and want to see people live out their fullest potential. I definitely believe that hard work, in anything, can bring about success. I love to learn new things about anything that I work on, and I love to pursue new merous optical applications, i.e., when working with lasers and similar amplifying devices in the surface-on geometry, it is important to be able to vary the transverse profile of the outgoing laser beam, to reflect it, simple, conically, from one surface to another. Until now, only aspheric mirrors have been able to serve this e. In connection with the use of aspheric mirrors for diverse applications, it is known to employ elements cut high-precision crystal glass to produce aspheric surface sections having the required profile. The efforts to or using perfect crystals as an alternative to using aspheric mirrors have, as yet, not been successful on many ts. Besides the fact that perfect crystals cannot be as easily machined in an economical manner as are glass ts, perfect crystals cannot be waferized, and it is questionable if they can be grown in a sufficiently large y. What would constitute an ideal solution for producing laser beam profile changers is a piece of material can be machined in the form of an arc on the basis of a predetermined, constant angular profile and then cut as needed by simply removing parts of the material, and which is simultaneously vibration resistant
